ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Democracy is a means of the reconciliation of all socio-political-economic confrontation of society. Democracy demands well instituted constitutional norms and dynamic political traditions. Inclusiveness of Indian democracy was to foster the achievement of multilateral objectives. India practiced a strong stereotyped social behavior and cultural traditions. Before independence our society was a bunch of inequalities and based on various socio-political privileges. The members of India's constitutional assembly believed in a powerful inclusion of all sects and segments of society in our democratic system. Various provisions of constitution such as rule of law, Equality before Law, Equal opportunity to all, Fundamental Rights and Universal Adult Suffrage etc. are the crystal clear proofs of our values and priorities of democratic inclusiveness. It is no exaggeration to say that the inclusive character of our democracy is its spirit and backbone. It is also the quintessence of the Indian constitution. Now a days we are celebrating seventy-nine years of our Democratic journey (Azadi ka Amrit Mahotsav) of inclusiveness and this is a true time of evaluation of our achievements and ailment or developments and debacle.

At the beginning of new millennium our democratic-Republic faces multidimensional social, political, economic, cultural and ecological crisis, which is shown to be caused by the concentration of power in the hands of various elites. In the phase of our contemporary years it has become popular among a few sections of society to downgrade the founders of the democracy. This segment of society is disappointed with the achievements of our democratic institutions. Along this unrest post globalization era is pushing to our Political system towards an amalgam of market economy, representative democracy and related forces of socio-political hierarchical structure. Now a days non-state actors playing influential role in the function of our democratic organizations. Our global position and power are going upside but our socio-economic parameters presenting dismal picture of society. Our G.D.P. accelerates but our rank on human development Index is more or less stable. Disparities in all segments of society, unequal rights on the distribution of natural resources, caste-religion-region based violence, lack of political tolerance and pseudo democratic representation are highlighting a necessity of the real and factual (not only ideological) need of Inclusive democracy. One of the most enduring questions is what should do to make our society and system more inclusive. More inclusiveness means more democracy and more acceptability towards diversified socio-political-cultural values within a democratic umbrella.
